

Celestial Conversations: Healing Relationships After Death

By Lo Anne Mayer

Did you ever wish you could mend a relationship with a loved one who has died? Does the memory of the unfinished business leave you feeling defeated, sad, or even angry? Author Lo Anne Mayer was in just that state in 2004 after witnessing the death of her eighty-six-year-old mother.

During their lifelong adversarial relationship, the two of them had never intimately connected.

Like many people, Mayer first tried to heal her grief in conventional ways. She talked to counselors and attended support groups. Though wonderful, they weren't enough.

Mayer didn't find the solace she needed until one morning, when she was alone at home, she opened a journal and wrote a letter directly to her mother. To her surprise, she received a reply. So began seven years of intimate correspondences with her mother's soul, the connection Mayer had longed for her whole life.

In Celestial Conversations: Healing Relationships After Death, Mayer tells the story of her mother's life and death and shares excerpts from the journals, which contain surprising and profound lessons on a number of topics from motherhood to forgiveness to karma.

When her own adult daughter Cyndi died by her own hand in 2005, the painful separation sparked another set of transpersonal journals, this time between Mayer and her daughter.

Today Mayer runs Celestial Circles for groups who want to try the method. For those who prefer to try on their own, she has written Celestial Conversations: A Guided Journey, available as a download for sale at www.CapeHouseBooks.com.

"Celestial Conversations is one of the most remarkable chronicles of its kind to emerge in recent years. Much evidence is emerging from consciousness research that survival of bodily death is real. This book helps confirm that evidence at the transpersonal level. Read and be inspired."
